JEWETT PARTY ARRIVES FROM MOTOR TRIP TO DETROIT AND BACK

Promptly at 6 last evening, the cross country car of P. M. Jewett of Phoenix, arrived from a jaunt to Detroit and back. Since May 5 the party has covered 9007 miles by actual speedometer record. On the last lap of the journey the Jewetts found the roads across Arizona in excellent condition, but rather sandy in spots. No washes nor mud interfered with touring this side of El Paso.

A sturdy Hudson stood by them on the trip, and all along they were accorded cordial receptions. The party consisted of P. M. Jewett, Mrs. Jewett,

P. M. Jewett, Phoenix Tourist, and Party at Detroit; 9007 Miles Is Their Record Since May 5

Edward Jewett, aged 74 years, father of Mr. Jewett, and the boy, Roy Jewett. The photo shows them at the Hudson factory in Detroit on July 10. From Phoenix to El Paso they followed the Borderland route, arriving after a pleasant run. Pushing on to Roswell, New Mexico, the party arrived in time to join the Ad Club on their run to Brownfield, Texas. Thence they proceeded to Amarillo, Dodge City, Joplin, Kansas City, and into St. Louis, which was the first important stop. The second lap reached to Detroit and passed old track, passing Vaughn and back to Roswell. From the city on the Pecos Jewett drove back to El Paso and from there home by way of Deming, Lordsburg, the San Carlos reservation and Globe. In all the trip he experienced no trouble with his car and but little with the roads. All along the weather and road conditions were most favorable, adding to the joys of outdoor motoring. At the Detroit factory, the Jewetts met a fine bunch of people and were treated in the most hospitable fashion.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE WIGWAM

To visitors from the interior of the United States to the coast there is no more fascinating experience than to watch the big battleships of Uncle Sam's navy go through even their regular work, to mention nothing of the special stunts such as firing practice, battle practice, and signal drill. Many persons in the interior have but little opportunity to see these things. Realizing this Manager Mullen of the Wigwam has procured a feature film from the Edison people that gives an absolutely true picture of the life of the sailors. The title of this film is "Ten days with a fleet of U. S. battleships." The pictures are taken of life on the new dreadnaught Minnesota.

This is not the only good thing on the program this week. "The Little Organ Grinder," "The School Teacher's Ward" and a "Back Window Comedy" make the entire entertainment a series of pleasures.

THE EMPRESS.

"The Man on the Box" is the story of a young man who is a practical joker. He refuses to attend the Embassy ball in Washington with his family because he has conceived a clever joke which he wishes to play on his sister Nancy. Imbued with the idea of giving her a rare fright, he bribed the coachman to lend him his livery and allow him to drive Nancy and her friend, Mrs. Conway, home from the dance. In the confusion of the departure of the carriages and the loud calling of the number of the vehicles, he mistakes his number 71 for 17 and jumps on the box just as two ladies enter the brougham. The joker Robert Warburton drives off down the avenue at a rare pace, causing the occupants of the carriage to call out for help, they are at once followed by two mounted policemen and when the equipage stops at the door and Robert snatches a kiss from his sister as he supposes, he is nabbed by the officers. The next morning in the police court his friend Charlie Henderson, a reporter comes to his rescue; the young woman whom he mistook for Nancy pays his fine as he has no money with him. She accomplishes this act after he has been returned to his cell and leaves a note asking him to take the place of her groom Saunders who has just left. Robert is so interested in her that he accepts the position and from then on his troubles begin for Betty Ansley, who he works for, suspects he is not a servant and tantalizes him to her heart's content being something of a joker herself. Of course the tale ends in happiness for everybody but before this happens much amusement is caused in the scene in the police court and at the dinner party where Robert or James Osborn as he is called, takes the place of the house who is conveniently sick, as a "favor to Miss Betty."

The chief characters in the play have already been commented on in these columns and it is only fair to speak of the excellent work of some of the less important performers. Frank Buttolph as Henderson the reporter, friend of Robert and fiancé of Nancy, has a role in which he appears to advantage. He has a number of clever lines and is able to get them across. Chas. Roberts has two small but difficult dialect roles but he makes them both realistic. Robin Williamson as the shrewd but kindly police judge made a favorable impression. Mr. McDonald as Officer Cassidy and Col. Frank Raleigh showed in both his makeup and his mannerisms that he is a veteran actor. Miss Fowler's flirtation with the judge at Betty's suggestion, was sufficiently flattering to have turned the head of a younger man than Watts. She is a character artist.

RECORD IS MAINTAINED

Another Patient Wanders
Away From the Asylum.
Walking to City in Stocking Feet; His Escape Unnoticed at Institution

Minus coat, hat and shoes, Conrad Wills, a patient at the Arizona state hospital for the insane, was picked up on Adams street between four and five o'clock yesterday morning by the night watchman at the Hotel Adams who turned him over to the night police.

He had walked the entire distance of more than three miles in his stocking feet and was footsore and tired when taken to the city jail. Six hours later he was given into the charge of an attaché of the asylum and returned to that institution.

Wills was committed to the asylum early last spring. He lived in Tucson and was engaged there in the second hand business. His mental irresponsibility was generally attributed by those who knew him in Tucson to the use of narcotics or liquor. He was sent to the asylum for safe keeping, as well as treatment.

Recently he has been a patient in East Cottage. This is one of the sections of the asylum where the patients are locked in at night and left unattended until morning, except for such attention as the general night watchman can give when making his regular rounds of the buildings and grounds.

It was an easy matter for Wills to attire himself in some clothes and effect his escape by prying loose one of the screens which are placed over the window openings of that building. His escape was not noted and his absence from the institution was unreported until notification was telephoned to the institution that the police had the man in custody.

When Wills was picked up he told Nightwatchman Ben Blakely that he had been sleeping at the fire engine house for two or three hours and that just why he was seeking the police judge, he was not sure.

To the police Wills admitted that he was a patient at the asylum. When the asylum was reached on the telephone, those who answered said they knew of no patient who was missing. A promise was made that an attendant would be sent for the patient at once. Six hours appeared and with no mention of the customary five dollar reward for the capture of an escaped patient took him back to the asylum. With the present system of having no attendant on duty at night in East or West Cottage, as well as some of the wards, the wonder seems to be that there is not a greater number of escapes in the night time. On some of the unattended wards are a number of epileptic patients who are subject to convulsions and who in most institutions are never from under the eye of an attendant ready to render help whenever they may be seized.

The street parade given in the afternoon contained a number of emblematic floats, decorated automobiles, and other vehicles that aroused the enthusiasm of the crowds that lined the streets.

The carnival is being given by the enterprising members of the woman's club for the purpose of raising funds for a club building. The carnival will continue tonight.
